2010 Three Valleys, bottled February 2012

An unusually cool growing season was interrupted in late August by two days of record-high temperatures, which damaged half the zinfandel crop. The sunburned clusters were cut out; fortunately, the remaining fruit ripened fully. The grapes fermented on naturally-present yeasts for ten days on average, extracting ample color and elegant tannins. After extensive tasting, we chose the most accessible lots from seven ranches for this, our only multi-vineyard wine. Aged for twelve months in american oak, the wine was clarified by racking, and filtered at bottling. Appealing fruit and bright acidity make this Three Valleys enjoyable now; it will be at its best over the next five years. JO/EB (10/11)
